As the school year ends, the Department of Community Service and Parent Resource Centers is proud of the many accomplishments and successes realized during the 2018-2019 school year. This parent engagement effort has indeed been a collaborative process through representatives from the various MUSD departments, including preschools and k-12 schools. Parent and families also benefited from leveraging resources provided directly by local colleges and universities, private and non-profit community agencies and organizations, city and county programs and community volunteers.

Together we were able to leverage resources to support and improve student academic achievement by providing schools with parent engagement services to provide parents with practical tools that inform them of the school system, and incorporates strategies and resources conducive to children's cognitive, academic, social, and emotional growth.

Guided by a vision of empowerment and collaboration, the Parent Resource Centers provided services to over 11,000 parents and delivered an impressive menu of educational services and resources. Also, we continued in our quest to mobilize our efforts to offer new academic programs that support both parents and students, and build partnerships and alliances with the Madera community. We made an impact through our daily involvement in critical issues such as student retention, graduation rates, customer service, online registration, and other areas that influence student success.

We believe the more informed parents are, the more engaged they will be with their children's education. Special thanks to our Board of Trustees, for their commitment to support parent engagement services and resources district-wide. We look forward to growing our programs as we move into the 2019-2020 school year.
