Weekly Updates

In an effort to streamline our communications during school closures, we have created a weekly community newsletter. This communication is the district's main form of communication with parents and the community. The newsletter will be available on our website and will be shared via email, text and voice message, and social media. It will be sent every Friday.

Online Computer Classes for Parents Coming Soon!

With schools closed and social distancing requirements in place, both students and parents need social interaction and practical engaging opportunities to learn from home. Despite the growing trend toward a more computer-savvy population, many parents have fallen behind the younger generation when it comes to technology adoption or accessibility.

The Parent Resource Centers are currently offering a pilot virtual computer class for beginners and intermediate students to help close the technology gap and support parents as they support their students at home with distance learning. The pilot class is now in session and parents can expect additional classes to roll out during the summer and into the fall semester.

The online computer classes are designed to understand the use of underlying technology including the Zoom application, receive training on software programs, mobile apps, and review the parent portal. Parents will acquire additional skills to assist students with distance learning, project-based learning, and increasingly important digital skills giving them the skills they need to succeed as digital learners, leaders, and 21st-century citizens.

For information and registration on the online computer class, call the MUSD Call Center at 416-5858. Use this link for additional information.
